

Onomatopoeia plays an important role in the Japanese.

Have you ever imagined the color of Onomatopoeia?

These onomatopoeia color ink will bring you unlimited space for imagination and make you have more fun during writing.

Water based ink 25ml Retail Price 2000JPY (without tax)

「Doki doki」

Doki doki is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing an excited heartbeat.

Dating with your crush for the first time, doki doki.

「Nyoki nyoki」

Nyoki nyoki is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing something growing vigorously.

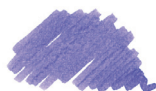

Bean sprouts are growing, nyoki nyoki.

「Uto uto」

Uto uto is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing someone nodding off to sleep.

Kitten lying under the sun, uto uto.

「Poro poro」

Poro poro is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing something slowly spilling or falling.

Sweet osmanthus falling down, poro poro.

「Kira kira」

Kira kira is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing something glittery or sparkly.

The glass bottle sparkled under the sun, kira kira.

「Sui sui」

Sui sui is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing something flowing smoothly and unimpeded.

The bird flies across the cloudless blue sky, suisui.

「Kasha kasha」

Kasha kasha is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing the clicking sound of a camera shutter.

Taking photos with a classic camera, kasya kasya.

「Puka puka」

Puka puka is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing something floating.

In summer, you can float in the swimming pool, puka puka.

「Kasa kasa」

Kasa kasa is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing the light rustling sound of leaves or other small, dry things brushing against each other.

Touching the dried flowers, kasa kasa.

「Fukufuku」

Fukufuku is a Japanese onomatopoeia describing something soft and plump.

In winter, the plump body of sparrows looks fuller and more lovely, fuku fuku.

